Ageing is a lifelong process and should be recognized as such. Preparation of the entire population for the later stages of life should be an integral part of social policies.

Paragraph 3

In the context of its own traditions, structures and cultural values, each country should respond to demographic changes which are dramatically altering the age-structure of the world population.

Paragraph 4

The promotion of the activities, safety and wellbeing of older persons should be and essential part of an integrated and concerted development effort within the developed and the developing parts of the world.

Paragraph 5

An important objective of socio-economic development is a society in which age discrimination and segregation are eliminated and in which solidarity and mutual support among generations are encouraged.

Paragraph 6

Recalling the International Plan of Action on Ageing adopted by the World Assembly on Ageing in 1982, the World Conference urges all nations to strengthen the implementation of the Plan of Action through existing United Nations guidelines such as the United Nations Principles for older Persons, adopted by the General Assembly in 1991, the Global Targets on Ageing for the Year 2001, adopted by the General Assembly in 1992."

VIE.93-257

PART II

Paragraph to be inserted after paragraph 12

A new paragraph should be inserted between paragraph 12 and paragraph 12 bis.

"The World Conference, recalling the relevant provisions concerning families contained in the international instruments on human rights, welcomes the proclamation by the General Assembly of 1994 as the International Year of the Family as a valuable opportunity to highlight the human rights dimensions of family issues. It reaffirms that the family is the natural and fundamental group unit of society and is entitled to protection by the society and the State, so that it may fulfil its important societal functions, which have direct ramifications upon the enjoyment of human rights. While, as a general principle, family's right to self govern should be respected, it should not be allowed to become a shield for discrimination, domestic violence, abuse or neglect of children and the denial of equal rights of its members, particularly women. It is essential that the principles of human rights and democracy are learned, practised and respected in the family."
